

The Bostonians are very well in their way. Their hotels are bad.
Their pumpkin pies are delicious.
Their poetry is not so good. Their Common is no common thing — and the duck-pond might answer
— if its answer could be heard for the frogs.

From “Editorial Miscellany,” *Broadway
Journal*, a New York literary magazine,
November 1, 1845